1. Introduction
Literacy is the ability to access, know, understand, and use information intelligently. Literacy village is understood as a collaborative effort of several components that exist in the Village community, synergizing and moving together in developing reading interest / culture, enhancing insights and stimulating various creativity and innovation in developing the quality of Rural Human Resources. The village literacy program is part of the Community Literacy Movement to support the Gerakan Indonesia Membaca (GIM) program launched by the Ministry of Education and Culture. "The goal is to provide reinforcement to the district and city governments in developing a reading culture for the community (Kemendikbud, 2016). Literacy programs are rooted in the complex social environment of literacy activities which implies that literacy programs must be realized according to their situation and conditions, because they adapt to various contexts. Barton and Hamilton (1998) wrote extensively on how literacy is most appropriately placed within the social context of multiple literacies to address the needs of society.

The real conditions in society can be used as a starting point for making changes through a village literacy movement including education. In a very strategic sector such as education, the government’s limitations in its services are also very concerning. Indeed, if viewed from the surface, the addition of school and college institutions, indeed every periodic increase appears. Also, if viewed from the level of community participation in education management, it shows a positive trend each period. It’s just that if seen more critically, this growth is artificial. Our world education pragmatism both from the side of the organizers and from the participants gave birth to a generation or output of education that should not have ideas and initiatives to open up new economic businesses, to be absorbed by the labor market, no one can provide guarantees. (https://rumahliterasiindonesia.org/desa-literasi, accessed, January 26, 2018).

Bejiharjo Village Karangmojo Subdistrict is one of the villages that has the tourism potential of ”Pindul Cave” which is becoming known by local and international tourists, so that community literacy skills can be empowered in accordance with the potential of the region, in addition to efforts to optimize learning groups ), and economic organizations in the village need to be empowered. to support capacity building and skills that are owned by the community. One program that can be developed is a village literacy program. The Literacy Village program can be a means of developing the knowledge and potential of local communities so that they have a broad understanding, adequate literacy skills and competencies. The community can explore and empower all the potentials of the region, both the potential of natural resources and human resources to the maximum to support the progress of the community and the region. Communities in Literacy Village can also develop local wisdom values that are part of people’s lives. This not only preserves and revives local wisdom, but also can create a village that has its own characteristics. This Literacy Village program is expected to be an example for local governments to be implemented and developed in other villages / regions.

Some initial descriptions of the condition of the Bejiharjo village are preparing themselves to become literacy villages, as follows:

Bejiharjo is a tourist village that has the potential to provide acceleration in community development. The presence of tourists contributes to the color and motivation of the community to grow and develop in accordance with the demands of the times. This condition is a potential asset for the community to improve their knowledge and functional skills. Along with the increasing number of tourist visitors in Bejiharjo, it has not been accompanied by community readiness to provide optimal services. Knowledge and skills of the community are still relatively minimal, so acceleration is needed in increasing knowledge, abilities and skills through educational activities.

From skills aspect, most of the people of Bejiharjo Village do not have the necessary skills to make an adequate living. Most sometimes work on their own land or farm laborers in other people's places. For those who have skills, it turns out that they also feel that the skills they have are still not enough to be used as venture capital. Some of the skills that have been received include; making cassava chips and making banana jam. The skills that have been acquired have not yet been widely practiced, there have been as many practices but more are used alone not for sale. Meanwhile, the desired skills are more business/selling skills (Sujarwo & Iutfi Wibawa, 2013; 2).

People's reading interest is still relatively low. Along with the development of the management of Pindul Cave natural tourism has a negative influence on people's reading interest. People's reading interest is still relatively low. Most people try to develop tourism service businesses that support skills in providing tourist services through training. The training gained is not supported by motivation and interest in reading various references or adequate learning resources. This condition is experienced by people in school age and productive age.

The system of values and norms adopted by the people of the village of Bejiharjo, Karangmojo Subdistrict, is still very aware of the traditions or customs that apply in this village. Traditional ceremonies, such as; “rasulan”, “resik desa”, death ceremony (three days, seven days, four days, one hundred days, one thousand days and so on). The role of the wife in the family caring for the children, keeping the house and property owned, helps the husband's work, so that the husband who is fully responsible for earning a living. This condition requires new knowledge and experience, so that the value system adopted does not bound the community to advance.

Seeing these conditions, it is necessary to conduct exploratory and descriptive research as an effort to find information about problems, potential and needs in an effort to prepare various village literacy programs in the village of Bejiharjo Karangmojo District, Gunungkidul Regency so that village village literacy design and village literacy program implementation can be arranged.

3.2. Discussion

Literacy is a collaborative effort of several components existing in the village community, synergizing and moving together in developing reading interest / culture, enhancing insights and stimulating a variety of community creativity and innovation in developing the quality of Rural Human Resources (HR). The whole activity is designed and directed in such a way as to facilitate the community, especially the youth and school age groups (productive) in order to play an active role in regional development. Collaboration is carried out by establishing and making “Rumah Baca” as a catalyst, liaison or media for families, Schools and Communities (Public) to be involved in learning activities that are of an alternative educational nature as the development of what has been given in formal schools.

To succeed in various village literacy programs, it is necessary to empower the potential of the village concerned. covering 1) human resources that have completed diploma and undergraduate programs (S1, S2, S3) that are sufficient to support village literacy programs, 2) Strategy and direction of Bejiharjo village development policy in building the quality of human resources provides facility support and activity financing Early Childhood Education and other non-formal education, after establishing partnerships with the government and PT in managing education programs in the community, 3)

Literacy village is a village area that is used to realize literacy communities (basic, advanced, and multi-literate) in order to have broader knowledge and understanding. Literacy Village is one of the programs of the Directorate of Literacy and Equality Education in order to create a community that is knowledgeable, skilled, advanced, and independent through reading and practicing in order to have a broad understanding. The existence of literacy villages provides an expanded access to information to the community, fosters and cultivates reading interests, develops positive attitudes, and develops skills. This is also a manifestation of lifelong learning.

Blake & Blake (2002) acknowledge that pursuing literacy is very complex and vulnerable to change based on circumstances which are different definitions would be impractical. They note that literacy programs consist of mixing academic and functional skills that vary depending on the needs and developments of the community. Defining literacy only as the ability to read and write is a less valued field complexity that includes a lot of knowledge and skills. UNESCO (2003; 21) defines literacy as the ability to identify, understand, interpret, make, communicate and count, using printed and written materials related to various contexts. Literacy involves a learning continuum in allowing individuals to achieve their goals, develop their knowledge and potential and participate fully in society and society at large.

As students in literacy programs get access to basic literacy skills, such as reading and writing, functional skills that have the opportunity to benefit from information in the context of their society. This condition is in line with the objectives of the government program in providing Literacy Village assistance as follows: a) as operational costs and or complementary operationalization of village literacy in terms of institutions and services so that the management of the Literacy Village program can run smoothly; b) encourage the existence of literacy villages in order to continue to improve the quality and quality of services so that they impact the quality of life of the local community, namely social, economic, cultural and health; c) increase the literacy of the village / village community; d) encourage the formation of a community of people who are fond of conducting cultural activities and reading habits (Kemdikbud, 2017)
Literacy village is an effort to realize a literary society with broad meaning, namely an effort to free the community from literacy in order to have broader knowledge and understanding. Literacy Village activities are focused on providing reading material at reading substations, Taman Bacaan Masyarakat (TBM), reading stalls, reading corners, Information technology, as well as arts and cultural literacy and health literacy. Many literacy programs can be worked on in the Village of Literacy. In the context of the Balinese village development jargon, the Village Literacy program is also very relevant. It’s just that you have to review it, don’t just let the program be just project oriented. Short term. Do not have a clear vision.

The village literacy program can be elaborated by the use of village funds to support the acceleration of village development. Therefore, recognition of a broad understanding of functions. Educator literacy programs should not be missed. Bartlett (2008) notes that educators now recognize literacy as closely related to their specific cultural location. Literacy villages, each reading center built, whether it’s called reading post, TBM, reading stalls, reading corners, or whatever the name suggests, is a large collection of books and non-books (films, music, information technology / teaching aids) that are also linear location characteristics that are used as reading outlets. In the posyandu waiting room, it is appropriate to reproduce books about health. In the workshop waiting room, treat customers with books and reading materials related to the automotive. Both motorbikes and cars. In the tourist waiting room, books and information about tourism around it are provided, and other supporting equipment. TBM and village libraries are a solution for the availability of reading access for the community. Thousands of TBMs and Moving Libraries sporadically grow and develop to supply the reading needs of citizens independently.

4. Conclusion
